

Are consultation-liaison psychiatrists better at diagnosing and treating catatonia?

Dr. Carroll:

They are more likely to diagnose catatonia. And they're more likely to prescribe the treatment for catatonia, as opposed to psychiatrists in other subspecialties—outpatient, inpatient, child and adolescent, geriatric, although each of these subspecialties is looking into and doing increased research on catatonia.